PROMINENT MEN OF JAPAN GREET WITH PANAMA IN THE PAST DECADE

pays all honor and tribute to the American teacher who showed him the way to learning. It may be recalled by some in Honolulu that Baron Kato passed through the city a dozen or so years ago as ambassador from Japan to Russia, en route to his post. At that time he sought out Professor Scott and visited him.

Two distinguished Japanese called on Professor Scott at the hotel this afternoon. One was J. Soyeda, the other S. Isawa, of the house of peers. Soyeda was formerly minister of finance and both are among the leaders in Japan today. And both were taught by Professor Scott. Instances like this might be multiplied almost indefinitely.

To Professor Scott the return to Japan after an absence of 33 years has been at once a deep pleasure and a source of some regret. Pleasure at seeing the great strides the nation has made in those years, at visiting familiar spots, at seeing old friends. And regret because so little that is familiar is now left, so few of the many friends still remain.

In Tokio this morning Professor and Mrs. Scott took rikshas and started out to visit some of the familiar scenes of their former residence. They returned two hours later, without having been able to find more than a very few of the loved spots of long ago.

"I cannot even find where my children were born," said Mrs. Scott. Of their former home no trace remains. The growth and changes of the city have swept away everything but such unchangeable landmarks as the tremendous castle moats. Professor Scott said today that only a few of the legations remain to tell him the story of the past. And it would seem that both he and Mrs. Scott find the Tokio of today less picturesque, less typical, less beautiful and less comfortable for residence than the Tokio of 40 years ago.

They were married here in 1875, at the residence of General Williams, who was then connected with the Japanese government. Prof. Scott's best man was D. W. Stevens, assassinated by Koreans in San Francisco some years ago. Their honeymoon trip was taken by Jiriksha to Nikko, where the Hawaii party visited a few days ago. For Prof. and Mrs. Scott, Nikko has changed less than the great city of Tokio. Then Tokio had a population of some 1,200,000, now at least a million more have been added. Then it was a great, sprawling medieval village, now it is a curious combination of the medieval and the modern. Here you see electric lights, paved streets, automobiles, and you also see the quaint shops and quaint folk of Japan. Tokio makes me think of a raw western town suddenly sprung up by virtue of a boom, for the principal streets and buildings have an undeniable air of newness, but off these streets one still finds plenty of the picturesque and the typical. And everywhere as in Yokohama, the Japanese are swarming in that restless, busy, aggressive way that seems to be characteristic in their cities here.

The Hawaii party will be kept busy for the next few days. Several functions have been planned that will be quite formal even though officially all big affairs have been called off because of the national mourning. The party will also do a great deal of sight-seeing, and the ladies have been getting ready to "shop in Tokio" ever since we landed from the steamer. The shops have a powerful lure for feminine eyes and tomorrow there will be a friendly invasion of the Ginza, or principal retail mercantile street. Today being Sunday shopping was not indulged in, even though mercantile Tokio does not apparently observe the Sabbath in any way. The shops are all open as usual and doing a brisk business.

Tomorrow morning most of the Hawaii party will visit the Woman's University here, the only institution of the kind in Japan. It will interest Honolulu to know that a former resident of the Crossroads of the Pacific is in charge of one of the departments at this university. Miss Fuji Koka, who was once a Bible woman in Honolulu, called at the hotel this morning and greeted Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Westervelt friends of some years ago. Miss Koka is an aunt of Mr. Sheba, promoter of the Hawaii excursion, and is a teacher at the Woman's University. She extended the invitation to visit the university, where brief talks will be given by several members of the Hawaii party.

The present plans call for a five days' stay in Tokio and a departure on Thursday for Miyazaki, a summer mountain resort 40 miles southeast of Yokohama.

U. S. COMMERCE WITH PANAMA IN THE PAST DECADE

WASHINGTON, D. C. — An indication of the stimulation of trade and industry in the republic of Panama and the Canal Zone in the brief period since the United States began work on the Panama canal is contained in recent figures compiled by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, department of commerce. They show that over 170 million dollars' worth of American merchandise has been exported to Panama and the
